CITIES OF PEACE®

A Positive Role in the Marketplace

Today, organizations are tasked with additional criteria for business success. New operational models such as Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR), the United Nations Global Compact Reporting (CoP), and other ratings standards and reporting urge businesses to engage as a positive force for the local and global community.

Social Responsibility entails inspiring youth.
In Guanajuato, Mexico: City of Peace, citizens created the Guanajuato Peace Flame Committee to educate youth and do practical work, such as delivering blankets to women of the Sierra de Santa Rosa.

Vetted volunteers, such as these ICP team members in needy areas of Ethiopia, are ready and waiting for your company to make a profound impact for humanity.

The Value Proposition for the Corporate Sustainability Program from International Cities of Peace

Safe, effective, "project-ready" programs worldwide that will exceed stakeholder expectations for your organization's commitment to Corporate Social Responsibility.

Cities of Peace on all continents, in North and South America, Africa, Asia, Europe and Oceania, are experiencing huge challenges: poverty, hunger, climate change and refugees. And it is up to the global community to ease their suffering and help them thrive.

Invest in People

Deliver immediate positive impacts on local communities

The stakeholders in corporate decisions have expanded from employees, customers, and suppliers to include partnerships with communities that contribute to their supply chain and distribution networks.

Indeed, there are many who want to invest time and energy in organizations that exhibit best practices and contributes to a stable marketplace essential to a Sustainable Growth Strategy (CGS) for long-term success.

The Evolution of the Corporate Social Conscience

Since the 1950's publication of Howard R. Bowen's book, Social Responsibilities of the Businessman, the bar has been raised for corporate engagement in society.

The idea of Corporate Responsibility has evolved toward Corporate Conscience, where consideration for the safety, prosperity, and quality of life for families and communities becomes a call to practical, consistent, and compassionate action.

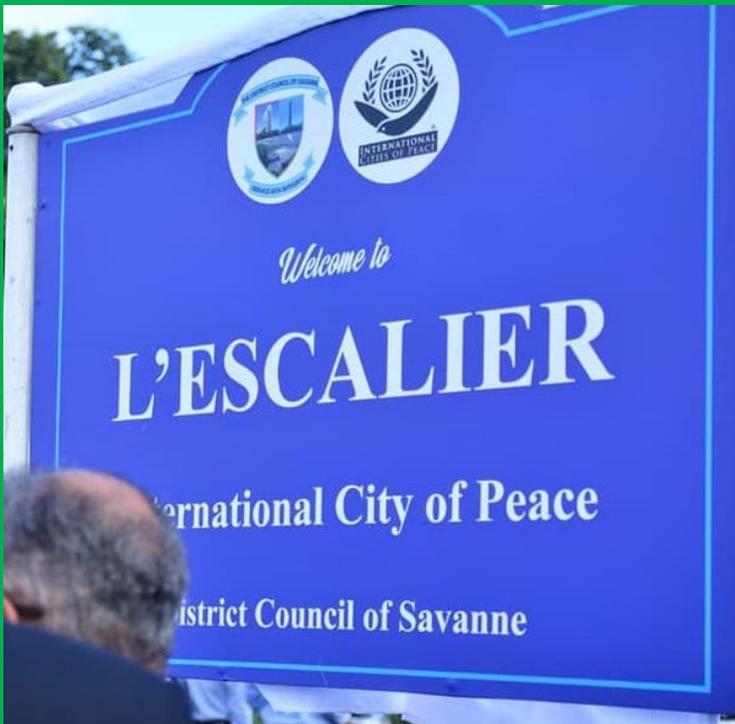

In Sangano, Uganda: City of Peace, the ICP Peace Team in the Nakivale Refugee Camp immediately began working on a building project for a new school.

Overcoming Challenges and Pitfalls

Increasingly, to be competitive organizations must factor into their business decisions a complex of marketplace concerns: diversity, inclusive governance, industry best practices, transparency and ethics, environmental impact, and equitable sourcing of raw materials and expertise.

*Is it possible for an organization to implement a simplified Social Responsibility program in such a complex business environment? Yes, it is!

In L'escalier, Mauritius: City of Peace, the island country is committed to organizing multiple Cities of Harmony in order to build unity and end division.

Sustainability of Your Enterprise

A Sustainability Program in Partnership with International Cities of Peace:

In Herat, Afghanistan: City of Peace, two young women started a school for girls in rural communities; with ICP's help, the two leaders are now working for humanity in other, safer countries.

- Provides a sound strategy for sustainability of your enterprise.
- Contributes to the health and welfare of the marketplace
- Helps comply with applicable laws and standards
- Builds employee commitment and productivity
- Ensures stakeholder confidence
- Establishes your organization as a socially responsible market leader

Your Report to Stakeholders:

A social commitment both purposeful and sustainable

Projects and programs developed and implemented by ICP leaders result in practical peacebuilding: safety, prosperity, and quality of life for all in the community.

- Build strong partnerships by developing effective relationships with local governments, NGOs, and community organizations.
- Empower local leaders who are committed to safety, prosperity and quality of life and equipped with resources, training and support.
- Engage youth in peace-building and creating the next generation of peacemakers.
- Continuously improve and refining strategies by developing both short-term and long-term relationships with those in communities focusing on societal justice and localizing a strong culture of peace.

Zihuatanejo, Mexico: City of Peace, the first of three Cities in the State of Guerrero where courageous leaders are working against the reign of violence.

International Cities of Peace is a proven partner in providing CSR relationship services to for-profit and not-for-profit organizations.

Hundreds of member Cities of Peace in the association of International Cities of Peace are staffed with leaders that are vetted and ready. Many communities are in great need and the leaders and their volunteer teams have projects in place to increase safety, prosperity, and quality of life for their fellow citizens.

The people you help, the success stories you create, will benefit those in need and bring pride and confidence for all your stakeholders, especially employees.

Corporate sustainability organizations can avoid the pitfalls of corruption, politics, religious and cultural conflicts, and wasted resources. With nearly 400 communities in 70 countries on six continents, companies can bring focus to a safe and effective program for societal good.

Durlesti, Moldova: City of Peace, a former Soviet Bloc country where the local library has instituted many on-the-ground peace initiatives to bolster democracy.

Wherever your organization is located, there are people and communities that are in need of a helping hand. North and South America, Asia, Africa, Europe, and Oceania.

The ICP CSR Corporate Connect™ program offers:

- Direct deployment to areas of need
- Accountability through financial transparency
- Measurable results from each program
- Stories and successes that achieve your goals

An introduction by ICP to vetted and honest community leaders can open a secure pathway to increasing corporate resiliency and capture positive stories of mutually beneficial engagement in local and global areas of great need.

The Positive “After Effect” of a Bottom-up Strategy

One of the most difficult realities of community engagement is that when the support is gone, so is the enthusiasm and continuity. With ICP, the leaders come to the programs after years of volunteering for community. They and their teams are deeply concerned and know what is needed in their neighborhoods and for their families. Your contributions will have an impact years into the future.

Dayton, Ohio: City of Peace where citizens held the names of nearly 400 Cities of Peace to give hope to many at-risk communities.

A Safe and Heartful Path to Social Action that Matters.

As International Cities of Peace introduces your organization to vetted leaders, we hope you will consider becoming a supporter of ICP's global network. Our program is expanding and in need of a cost-effective technology upgrade. Major donors are honored and receive many benefits, including a free web page to document and publicize your organization's community work. Please get in touch for details. Thank you!
